LINDBERGH ARRIVES SAFELY IN MEXICO CITY; FOUGHT WAY THROUGH FOG AND HEADWINDS

(By International News Service)
MEXICO CITY, Dec. 14.—Colonel Lindbergh passed over here at 2.30 Mexican time. The plane was positively identified as the "Spirit of St. Louis."

After fighting his way down the coast through fog and headwinds at an approximate speed of 90 miles an hour, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, enroute from Washington to Mexico City upon a non-stop, good-will flight, crossed the Mexican line between 6 and 7 o'clock, according to reports from points along the route.

Lindbergh was reported to have passed Tampico, Mexico, at 9.50 (E.S.T.), at which place he was to turn inland towards the Mexican Capital.

Aransas Pass, Texas, reported that Lindbergh flew over that place at 5.03 (E.S.T.) at a speed estimated at about 128 miles an hour. Aransas Pass is approximately 1,400 miles from Washington, 150 miles from the Mexican border and 290 miles from Tampico.

Despite bad weather Lindbergh followed the course he had planned for himself, using a map he had drawn himself. His rate of speed evidently varied, according to the weather conditions he encountered.

Port Aransas reported fog over the Gulf of Mexico coast but clear weather inland.
Tampico is 220 miles from Mexico City.

PORT ARANSAS, PADRE ISLAND, TEXAS, Dec. 14 (I.N.S.)—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh's "Spirit of St. Louis," in which he is attempting a non-stop flight from Washington, D. C., to Mexico City, passed over this city at 4.03 a. m. today.

Lindbergh apparently was following the coast line closely all the way from Galveston south.

His estimated speed to this point was 128 miles per hour, according to airmen here, and at this rate he should reach Mexico City shortly after noon today if he has good luck.

A heavy fog envelops the coast.

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 14 (I.N.S.)—Heading south in good time, Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, America's lone eagle, was expected to be deep into Mexican territory when dawn broke today. He is due here early this afternoon, about 24 hours after his hop from Boling Field, Washington, D. C., in the "Spirit of St. Louis."

Weather over the Mexican Gulf territory was reported as ideal and when last sighted last night the hero of the first New York to Paris flight was maintaining a steady speed of nearly 100 miles an hour.

According to advices received here early this morning, a plane was heard flying over Matamoros, Mexico, shortly after midnight. Matamoros is near Brownsville, Texas.

State News

ABINGTON, Pa., Dec. 14 (I.N.S.)—Rebelling at what they term an "unjust and obsolete" law, five hundred residents of Abington Township flatly refuse to pay a per capita head tax of $4.86 each.

Deputy Sheriff C. R. Bechtel reported that the majority of those who refuse to pay the personal tax are women, two of whom were recently arrested for their delinquency.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 14 (I.N.S.)—A special army of two hundred City Hall detectives has been assigned to Philadelphia's largest stores to watch for shoplifters and pickpockets who annually take advantage of holiday crowds of shoppers to make their hauls.

HARRISBURG, Dec. 14 (I.N.S.)—Fifty-two times $20 doesn't total $100,000—and therein lies the cause for Mrs. Eoula Xanthos Davis' suit for divorce from Charles Davis.

Mrs. Davis told a local court that Charles wooed her in Sparta, Greece, and won her hand by telling her his annual income was $100,000 in Harrisburg. With visions of motor cars and a country home to lure her, she married him, she says.

She came with him to Harrisburg, where she says Charles has the lunch concession in a local department store, where his net income is $20 a week.

Police records show that blonde are the most dangerous women. This also proves that gentlemen are not cowards!

OFFICERS ARE ELECTED FOR THE VARIOUS COUNTY SCOUT COUNCILS

Program for the Year 1928 is Discussed — Scouts Repairing Old Toys for the Poor Kiddies at Christmas Time — Other Interesting Features Are Being Planned

By A Good Scout
Officers for the year of 1928 were reelected in the following Districts of the Bucks County Council, Boy Scouts of America. For the Bristol District, Carl Wenzel was elected chairman, and Dr. Frank Lehman vice-chairman. For the Delaware Valley District Rev. F. B. Barnett, of Yardley, was elected chairman, and Dr. A. J. Strathie, of Newtown, vice-chairman. For the Doylestown District Thomas Ross was elected chairman and Rev. Charles F. Freeman vice-chairman.

All of the districts accepted the district by-laws as proposed at previous meetings. Plans were finally made for the holding of Court of Honor during Anniversary Week of the Boy Scouts of America which will be in the month of February. Final arrangements were made for the starting of the merit badge examinations so that the vocational guidance program of the Boy Scouts will begin before the first of the year. The entire program of the Bucks County Council for the year 1928 was discussed. The investigation and securing an individual within each of the districts to function as a deputy commissioner, whose duty it is to lead the volunteer leaders in each of the districts, was presented and discussed with the decision made to interest someone. All of the meetings had excellent attendance, many of the men traveling great distances to be present.

Another progressive feature of next year's Scout program will be the four sessions for leaders in Sea Scouting which will be held at the Central Y. M. C. A. at Philadelphia, during the four Wednesdays of January. Sea Scouting offers to the older boy who has left Scouting or the boy at least 16 years old, a chance to gain a knowledge in regards to boats, navigation, weather lore and many of the interesting subjects pertaining to the sea. Before starting ships or units in our Council it is necessary to have men who enjoy water activities and boys who will volunteer to become Skippers. This title corresponds to the Scoutmaster who is in charge of a troop of Scouts. Sea Scout ships, when attached to a troop, have a mate who acts as an assistant to the Scoutmaster who is then known also as a Skipper. For the men who take this course there is a possibility of higher rank.

A number of Scout troops throughout the county are now repairing old toys to give to poor "kiddies" around Christmas time. The Troop Committee of Troop No. 1, Bristol, gave the Scouts of their troop a Christmas party last week. We are glad to welcome Troop No. 1, Morrisville, with William Burgess, Scoutmaster and Troop Committee members Hughes, Hibbs and Rev. Mytton. The Perkasee American Legion and Fire Company strongly endorse Scouting and the splendid work of Scoutmaster Claude N. Gilbert.

One of the happiest prospects, as we view the end of the year, is that Scouting in Bucks County will begin the year without one lapsed Troop—the goal which is almost in sight.

COMEDY SKETCH WILL FEATURE ENTERTAINMENT

St. Mark's Children to Present Entertainment on Friday And Saturday

MEMBERS OF CLUB

Excitement runs high at Saint Mark's School as the children of the grammar and the commercial grades make their final preparations for the Christmas concert to be held on Friday afternoon, December 16, at three o'clock and on Friday and Saturday evenings, December 16 and 17, at eight-fifteen.

One of the features of the concert is a comedy sketch: "The Go Do It Club's Christmas," in which the following take principal parts:

Members of the "Go Do It Club": Rita Barnfield, Jane McElroy, Mary Barrett, Mary J. McGee, Frances Waters, Angeline Couris, Mary Williams, Violet Clardy, Josephine Junod.

Briefs

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., Dec. 14 (I.N.S.)—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, who braved storms aplenty on his hop from New York to Paris, may find a tempest of another nature brewing if he attends the annual State College Military "hop" here, to which he's been invited.

Tradition demands that the guest of honor at the Military Ball lead the Grand March—which means that Lindy, whose bashfulness in the presence of the fair sex is well known—must have a partner.

Being very much unmarried, it may be necessary to choose a co-ed for the Colonel, and a feminine war is in prospect here for the honor of promenading with "Lindy."

The dance is to be January 13, and as yet Col. Lindbergh has not accepted the invitation.

LEBANON, Pa., Dec. 14 (I.N.S.)—Mayor John Walter, testifying in his capacity as a practicing physician in court here, held that a teaspoonful of liquor might be sufficient in some cases to put a person "under the influence of intoxicants."

"A person is under the influence of liquor if he is stimulated by the beverage," Dr. Walter said.

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Dec. 14 (I.N.S.)—An unattractive face is insufficient grounds for separation, Judge John Fine ruled here in bringing about a reconciliation between a Plymouth, Pa. couple.

The wife, beautifully gowned and highly attractive, appealed to the Judge to order her husband from her home "because he is homely." The husband pictured a domestic triangle in his counter charges. The Judge listened to an airing of their difficulties, then patched matters up and sent the couple home.

WOMAN OFFICER NABS A SUBSTITUTE "DOCTOR"

Dr. Martindell's Substitute Is Arrested in Burlington Office by Constable

TOOK REFUGE IN CELLAR

BURLINGTON, N. J., Dec. 14.—Dr. Walter B. Martindell, chiropractor, of 109 North Willow street, who figured prominently in the news three years ago when he was convicted and sentenced in Bucks county, for practicing without a license, is again in the lime-light by reason of the arrest of a man who took charge of his local office.

Dr. Joseph Lissner, a Philadelphia chiropractor, took over Martindell's Burlington practice for a few days while the latter was recuperating in Atlantic City from an illness. Lissner had no license to work in New Jersey. Friday afternoon Mrs. Elizabeth Burroughs, Mount Holly, Burlington county's only woman constable, arrested Lissner after a chase that enlivened staid old East Broad street, Burlington.

Mrs. Burroughs drove to the Birch Building on East Broad street with a warrant charging Lissner with practicing without a license. Lissner, who was in Martindell's office in the Birch Building, ran out of the office when he learned he was being sought. A crowd gathered and helped Mrs. Burroughs guard all exits while a search of the inside of the building was made. Lissner was finally found hiding in the cellar of the building.

The woman constable took her prisoner to Mount Holly, where he was arraigned before Judge William Slaughter. The defendant was released upon furnishing cash bail of $200, the amount fixed as the maximum fine in the event of conviction.

Dr. Martindell, commenting on the plight of Lissner, characterized the arrest as "persecution."

"Dr. Lissner is a friend of mine, and he took over my Burlington practice to aid me while I was ill," Martindell said. "He is an able chiropractor, licensed under Pennsylvania law, but has no license to practice in this state. His case is similar to my own trouble in Pennsylvania."

Dr. Martindell served six weeks of a six months' term in the Bucks County Prison at Doylestown in 1924 for practicing chiropractic in Bristol. His bitter contest of the case drew nation-wide attention.

JOHNSTON CALLS OFF THE NATIONAL GUARD

Says He Will Not Attempt To Prevent Meeting Of Senate

WILL EMPLOY COUNSEL

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Dec. 14 (I.N.S.)—Gov. Henry S. Johnston, who followed the precedent established by Gov. Jack Walton in 1923 by calling out State militia to prevent a legislative impeachment session, weakened today.

The executive removed the guard from the Senate chamber, permitting the Senate to meet later in the day. The guard continued to bar admission of House members to their chamber in the other wing, however.

Mac Q. Williamson, president pro tempore of the Senate, announced a meeting of the Senate at 10 o'clock. Whether the regular proceedings will be followed as in the case of the impeachment and removal from office of Governor Walton four years ago had not been decided.

In the Walton case the executive was suspended from office. He was permitted to employ counsel. The (Continued on Page Six)

LIGHT AT LANGHORNE TO GUIDE AIRPLANES

Beacon To Shine Guidance At Top of Langhorne Hill

A REVOLVING LIGHT

LANGHORNE, Dec. 13.—One of the large beacon lights in a chain being erected between New York and Atlanta, Georgia, for the guidance of mail planes is nearing completion here.

The huge light, located on the crown of Bellevue avenue hill, in Langhorne Manor, is of the revolving type, and when in operation will make one complete revolution every seven seconds. The beacon is one of the type commonly referred to as the "clock-light," which automatically is illuminated at dusk and is turned off in the same manner at dawn.

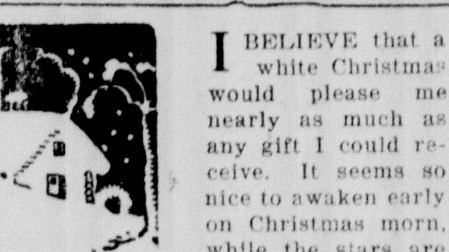

The nearest light in the chain to the north is located at Trenton, N. J., while the next on the south is at Philadelphia.

It was thought that work on the tower, which is of steel construction, with a concrete base, would have been completed by this time, but weather (Continued on Page Six)

GREETING CARDS TELL THOSE AFAR THAT HOME FOLKS ARE THINKING OF THEM

A "White" Christmas, Gifts That Are Sure To Please, And Joy In the Heart Will Make A Happy Yuletide Combination

By "GIFT SEEKER"

I BELIEVE that a white Christmas would please me nearly as much as any gift I could receive. It seems so nice to awaken early on Christmas morn, while the stars are still shining, and look out upon the earth covered with a blanket of snow. With such a clear early morn before dawn, it gives one such a happy feeling, to start out on a crisp, cold day, with the stars twinkling o'erhead, and enter the church doors just as the strains of a Christmas hymn are wafted into the air.

Speaking of a happy feeling, I think that much of the joy at the Yuletide is gained in receiving cards from those who are far away. Many a time we feel we cannot give gifts to all whom we would like to remember, but it is so easy to send cards, and then the acquaintances who do not live very close, know that old friends at home think of them even at a busy season. I secured some with lovely sentiments at Douglass' Pharmacy yesterday, choosing several designs. After I had completed this purchase I noticed some lovely school companions, complete with a number of pencils, a pen holder, eraser, ruler, etc., and had one wrapped as a gift for little Johnny Mentill, a neighbor's boy.

When I started out yesterday I decided I would look about up-town, and learn just what the business men who catered to the public in that section had upon their shelves. At the Clymer-Maytag Company's store, on Farragut avenue, I found a lovely Perfection oil heater, and I then remembered hearing sister Julie say that she would like to have one for use in the nursery on cool mornings. I left an order for one finished in light blue and nickel. I was surely pleased with the appearance.

Enroute down Pond street, I stopped before the windows of the Modern Plumbing & Heating Company, to see the radiator enclosures which I had heard mother talking of. She has mentioned her desire for enclosures finished in ivory, and after I had one peep at them I made up my mind that I would add my few words of persuasion in order to win dad. If he sees the ones on display once, the rest will be easy. It would be so nice to have them by the time our guests arrive for Christmas.

At Corn's, 115 Mill street, I procured a dainty buffet set, made of natural color linen. The pieces were edged in a lace which matched the material every well. Corn's window display is lovely showing a fine variety of gifts.

Many sales of the electric angel chimers are reported by Wright's Pharmacy, at 123 Mill street. I had heard of the chimers and yesterday I stopped in this enterprising druggist's place of business to view them. This little ornament measures eight inches in height, and it is made of nickle and colored metal. There are six angels that hold three differently tuned bells that chime when the lights are turned on. One of these chimers will grace the top of our tree this Christmas-tide.

Of course we must never forget the feast for the 25th of the month, and the staff of life is especially necessary. Our entire family is very fond of the rolls baked at Stetson's Bakery, Mill street, and so that none of us would be disappointed on this day of days, I dropped in the bakery and placed our Christmas order early.

A mixing spoon, a wire strainer, egg beater and a cake-turner, compose a tiny set of kitchen aids that I purchased of Charles Hillanbrand, opposite the passenger station of the Pennsylvania Railroad. The handles of this little set, which I know little Dora will use every day to assist her mother with the baking, are finished in blue, and are exact reproductions of those every housewife uses.

Just as I entered the door at home I heard mother 'phoning to Schmidt's, Otter street, about a small Christmas tree she wanted sent to the house just before the big day. Then we both commenced talking about the progress we were making, and couldn't help but be pleased that we had been able to nearly finish our preparations in such a short time.

INVITE SANTA TO VISIT BRISTOL AT COMMUNITY TREE

Committee Also Asks Him To Bring 500 Gifts For Children

AWAIT HIS ANSWER

Committee Hopes That He Will Accept The Invitation

Plans were arranged for a Community Christmas Tree at a meeting held in the Post rooms of Robert W. Bracken Post, No. 382, American Legion, last night. All of the co-operating organizations such as the Legion, Rotary, Exchange clubs and Mill Street Business Men's Association were represented at the meeting and the committee went into details as to the arrangements for the affair.

The tree, as last year, will be erected on the property of Refiners Oil Company, Pond and Market streets, and on Christmas Eve, at 8 o'clock, will be brilliantly illuminated for the first time.

A letter has also been written to Santa Claus by the Community Christmas Tree Committee, requesting Santa to visit Bristol on the night before Christmas and to bring with him gifts for 500 children.

The committee announces that should Santa find time on this, his busiest night, to visit Bristol, and should he find it possible to bring along with him 500 presents, that the gifts will be distributed by Santa himself, to the boys and girls of Bristol.

The letter to Santa was dispatched via Air Mail today so that there would be no doubt as to it reaching him in time for him to make the necessary preparations. The letter was given to Postmaster Clarence G. Young and he dispatched it at once to Philadelphia, where it will be picked up by the Air Mail and carried to Santa's own workshop.

The letter said:

Dear Santa—

A joint committee composed of members of American Legion, Rotary and Exchange clubs and Mill Street Business Men's Association, is going to have a Community Christmas Tree in Bristol, Pa. The tree is to be located on the property of the Refiners Oil Company, Pond and Market streets, and on the night before Christmas at 8 o'clock, it is to be illuminated with colored lights, and members of the choir of the various churches of Bristol will gather about the tree and sing Christmas carols. A brass quartette will accompany the singers and the committee thought that it would be a fine thing if you could take time out of this busy night to pay a special visit to Bristol and to bring with you 500 toys for the children of Bristol.

The committee realizes that Christmas Eve is a busy night for you, and that no doubt you have thousands of gifts yet to prepare, but a special plea is made that you endeavor to arrange a visit here. It will gladden the hearts of the children of Bristol and make it a very happy occasion.

Now, dear Santa, we will anxiously await your reply.

Yours very truly,
Community Christmas Tree Committee of Allied Organizations of Bristol, Pa.

The committee announces that all of the choirs of Bristol are urged to meet at the tree and aid in singing the carols.

Daughters of Columbus To Give Card Party Tonight

The Daughters of Columbus will hold a card party in the Knights of Columbus' Home on Radcliffe street, this evening a eight-thirty o'clock sharp.

Pinochle and "500" will be played. Many beautiful and useful prizes will be awarded to the winners and a good time is in store for everybody.

The committee in charge of this party has been working hard and it promises to be a very successful party.

DISCONTINUE SEWING

Sewing for the Needlework Guild of Bristol will be discontinued until Tuesday, January 3rd. Those who gathered in the Community House yesterday to continue with the work were: Mrs. Fred Kring, Mrs. Edgar Opyk, Mrs. Clifford L. Anderson, Miss Katherine Keating, Miss Ida Bruden.

HAYS, THE FILMS AND ART

On its face, the invitation of filmland's czar to an organization to assist in purging the films of all that might be offensive to the Jews seems a fair and sympathetic enough offer. But does it not open the way for some hilarious suggestions?

Once taken advantage of by one race, religion or group, the privilege cannot be denied to others. And Will Hays must certainly know that every race, nationality, section, creed, sect, group, special interest and moral plane have been seeking just that special privilege ever since the nickelodeon days.

The difficulty with such a plan of informal censorship is that it would bring down upon the movies a horde of touchy, thin-skinned propagandists and calamity howlers. And they would not be content with merely cutting the celluloid. Each would demand films glorifying his own little cause and "exposing" the evils of all other causes at variance with it. Touchiness is already too much encouraged, especially among those hurt by the truth.

And do conditions justify such a censorship? The movies are made to please the public. They are produced and exhibited by men interested in profits. Neither will the public be pleased nor the profits made by films that are offensive or prejudicial to any large group. The film interests are astute in business and do not need to be instructed in such elementary matters.

There is but one form of censorship that can place moving pictures on the same plane with the drama. But it will not be a confusion of small, fault-finding interests. It will be the censorship of intellect, truthfulness and art.

METROPOLITAN "ADVANTAGES"

While British "propagandists" are harassing Mayor Thompson in Chicago, gunmen, gangsters, bandits and second-story men are causing his right-hand man, Chief of Police Hughes, no end of trouble.

In his campaign against crime Hughes caused to be broadcast throughout the city an official bulletin advising the law-abiding fraction of the citizenry how to lock thieves out of their homes and otherwise aid the police in stilling the crime wave. One bulletin for posting in every Chicago home reads:

"When you go out, securely fasten all windows and doors. Install chain locks on front and rear doors to prevent entrance while conversing with strangers. This precaution may save your life. Money, securities and other valuable articles should be kept in a safe deposit box in a reputable bank. Burglars rarely enter a home where a light is burning. The phone number of your nearest police station is—"

The advantages of a wide-open town where blind pigs flourish and attract the clientele usually associated with lax enforcement of the laws are to be inferred from these instructions. And yet there are towns in this favored land where doors need neither locks nor chains, and where the householder is not in fear of his life when he answers a knock at the door. But such towns are not wide-open by official ukase.

After all the advantages are not all in the city. Right now there are many who are thankful their homes are not in the Chicago beer-war zone, and no doubt there are many Chicagoans who long for the peace and security of the small city and town.

Care of the Veteran

Bristol, Penna.,
December 10, 1927.

To the Editor of The Bristol Courier:

Sir: As the holiday season approaches, the unsuspecting public will again be confronted by panhandlers, impostors and alleged war veterans asserting they have worn the uniform. The public has a right to know that honorably discharged war veterans, tracing their disabilities to the service, are usually compensated according to their degree of disability. Those otherwise incapacitated requiring care, treatment or hospitalization are generally accorded the hospitality of the various veterans' hospitals, national homes and other Federal institutions scattered throughout the land, and there can be no legitimate reason for a self-respecting veteran applying to the generous, sympathetic public.

SYNOPSIS

Fabien, good and handsome youth of France, trains for the priesthood, but meets and loves Manon, Lescout, beautiful orphan, whose rascally brother, realizing her worldly value, bargains her to Ravoire, rich connoisseur of women. Fabien saves her and carries her off to Paris. Manon's brother steals her for Ravoire. Circumstances force her to surrender to Ravoire. Fabien, thinking her perfidious, returns to his studies. But Manon seeks him, explains, and they go to Paris again, where they live in dreamlike splendor. Then creditors besiege them.

"No? But it is pleasant even if one does not plan ahead to indulge." Spurred on by the bailiffs' surprise and anger, Fabien was having a delightful time. Returning the snuff box to his pocket with apparent regret, he continued, "Perhaps a sip of wine would be more to your liking?" Without waiting for a reply he filled three glasses from a ewer on the table.

"Help yourselves, gentlemen—to your very good health—and future success!" Fabien raised his glass and waited, but not for more than a second. The men's red faces indicated too plainly that they never refused a drink.

After the rich red wine had passed their throats it seemed to wash away the anger and the hateful words that had been struggling for utterance.

"Monsieur, we are sorry that it is our unpleasant duty to be insistent, but your creditors are very pressing and we must have money today."

At last it was out, mellowed perhaps by wine, although no less

"You could make money at the card tables—if you would."

true and foreboding in the horrible consequences if the demands were not met.

"I have told the creditors that I will pay them next week," Fabien succeeded in making his voice stern and final.

"Yes, you have told them that every day for weeks! We will not leave here without the money," snorted the other bailiff angrily.

The furnishings in this house are worth a considerable amount," the other continued speculatively as he appraised the valuable tapestries, the rich hangings and rare ornaments in the room.

Fabien understood their intentions and squirmed uneasily. How terrible for Manon if the furnishings she loved were moved out to meet creditor's demands. For a moment he thought desperately about how he could get rid of the collectors; then a smile spread over his face and he said to the bailiffs: "Your expression reminds me—as Richelleu said to Madame du Barry just as she was about to—if you have heard this priceless story, stop me—de Barry was on the point of—" With a friendly hand on each man's shoulder Fabien lowered his voice and continued the point of his story as he craftily guided them toward the door without their realizing what was happening.

Fortunately they enjoyed a rare sit of gossip as much as a glass of wine. Deeply absorbed in the scandal they were oblivious to their surroundings until they found themselves in the open entrance of the house. Immediately they recalled their duty and began noisy protestations.

"Next week," Fabien said with a disarming smile, "word of honor," and closed the door in their faces. It was a narrow escape and good riddance. However, Fabien was worried because that sort of thing could not continue indefinitely. His credit was exhausted and he had postponed payments so many times that it could not be done again. It would have been comforting to share the worry with Manon, and although Fabien longed for her sympathy, he had sworn never to make her practice economy; he must handle the matter alone. His air of carefree gallantry vanished with the departing bailiffs.

Dejectedly entering the library he began sorting over great sheafs of unpaid and long overdue bills. Among them were a number of extravagant ones incurred by Lescout. It was an imposition. Aside from his income, Lescout had gleaned enough from the gaming tables to live in luxury, but he spent enormous sums indulging his various appetites and a big amount was hoarded away for an indolent old age. Lescout was crafty.

After the inhuman way he had treated his sister neither she nor Fabien had any desire for his society. But unfortunately the house they leased was in the very neighborhood selected by Lescout, after the Comte ousted him following Manon's unceremonious departure. One day he chanced to see Manon leave her carriage. Immediately he followed her into the house and not many hours elapsed before he established himself in their midst.

Lescout was rude and without the slightest principle of honor, so it meant nothing to him that his presence was undesirable. He was determined upon a friendly relationship, because it meant a reduction in personal expenses. By preference he was a card sharp and a gambler, but recently his hand had grown unsteady so that good fortune was as fickle and elusive as luck. Money became the most desirable of all possessions and he took all he could get whenever possible. As long as Fabien could provide handsomely, after the manner of the Comte, Manon's choice of lovers was agreeable to her unscrupulous brother.

Lescout sauntered into the library while Fabien was pondering over finances. Having secretly been through the bills himself, he merely as a matter of curiosity, he knew that matters were painfully pressing.

"What are you going to do about it?" he inquired.

"What is there to do?" Fabien shook his head hopelessly and looked into space. He had promised the bailiffs that money would be forthcoming on the following week, but there was no more chance of having it than there was of seeing it appear on the desk before his very eyes in the next five minutes. One was exactly as hopeless or possible as the other.

Lescout shrugged his shoulders. There was something that could be done if Fabien would agree. Picking up a deck of cards from the table, his expert fingers casually divided the pack and shuffled them quicker than the eye could follow.

"You are clever enough to make your living at cards," he remarked as he again shuffled in mid-air. "Once you learn the tricks of the trade, it is simple."

"Never!" With a fleeting expression of horror Fabien shook his head decisively.

"Then why not retrench?" Again Lescout shrugged and continued shuffling the cards directly in front of Fabien. "Cut down expenses—get yourselves a farm in the country and a nice little plow—Manon would like that!" He laughed tauntingly.

"If I am not able to supply Manon with the luxuries she loves I deserve to lose her."

"You could make money at the card tables—if you would," the gambler temptingly stated a fact.

"Cheating at cards is out of the question—for a gentleman, and I was born that. My ancestors were honorable men."

Fabien was proud. "Mine were not, thank God!" retorted Lescout heartily. "I inherited pluck, not scruples." Lescout continued as Fabien stared gloomily out the window. "Take a man with millions, and there are many of them in Paris, does he mind losing a hundred louis? Not! And isn't a hundred louis better for being in circulation? It's only justice!"

This was more philosophical than anything Lescout had said before. Fabien made no reply. Amused interest. Conscious of his attitude, Lescout calmly shot an ace out of his sleeve. Fabien watched with a fascinated intensity that was not lost on the trickster. Again Lescout manipulated the aces.

"Ah!" exclaimed Fabien admiringly.

"Do you want to try?" Lescout offered the cards.

"You flatter me—I am not that clever—but as a matter of curiosity I will see if my fingers are as quick as yours," Fabien accepted the cards.

Both men stared in amazement as Fabien dealt an ace from his sleeve with as much adroitness as his teacher had displayed. "A bit of luck, that! You can't do it again," came from Lescout. The first glow of success went to Fabien's head and he was annoyed at having Lescout steal the glamour by terming it "luck." Just to prove that he had mastered the trick, Fabien shot two cards from his sleeve in quick succession. He was very pleased with himself.

For the Living Room

Well, if it is a splendidly "worth while" Christmas gift you are in search of, take note of this adorable cushion and footstool set. Both stool and cushion are made of black felt, this material being strongly featured for home decoration just now. The decorative flowers are made of felt in all the gay colors, standing out in bold relief against their black background. Nothing handsomer for the living room than these sets!
